Jeff

I understand our clients have spoken and agreed to rescind the agreement. Attached is a draft for your review.

Dear Jeffrey and Lisa:

Although the parties attempted to lay the groundwork for a merger of their companies, it appears that even that limited and incomplete blueprint has not been abided by. I am advised that there has been no effort to begin the process or to institute any of the steps detailed therein.

On a more troubling note, I am advised that Ms. Navarro lacked the ability to even make the commitment to provide Mr. Forkosh with 50% of Espire as John Radke and others are equity owners in Espire as well.

Mr. Forkosh has no interest in taking action with respect to the foregoing, as long as we can agree to declare the incomplete agreement which was signed to be null and void, and acknowledge that Ms. Navarro and Mr. Forkosh have no rights, interests or obligations with respect to any company in which other has an interest, leaving everyone free to pursue their own interests.

We can discuss it further if you feel otherwise. If not, I suggest a very simple document to memorialize the foregoing.
